Incidents of moral policing by alleged Hindu Vigilantes

2.1.2014. Mangalore.

The December 18, 2013 incident at Deralakatte in which a criminal gang kidnapped a student couple and demanded ransom money after filming their sex act was given a communal color and sought to be used for political purposes by the Sangh Parivar after it became known that the gang members and the male victim belonged to the Muslim community. The Sangh Parivar organizations held protest meets and demonstrations across the district. In some places provocative banners were put up with headings such as "It's one rule for the Hindus and a different one for the Muslims. Is this right?", "Are you all dead?", "Why nobody is raising his voice?" Following media reports and public protests, the police got into action and removed all such banners. A sample of the provocative banner as published in "Karavali Ale" dated 2.1.2014:

Note: Interestingly the Sangh Parivar's dramatic acts came to an abrupt end after Dr Narendra Nayak, president of Federation of Indian Rationalists Association and his wife, Asha Nayak, a lawyer, held a press meet on January 10 and explained how they were instrumental in nabbing the culprits and how the male victim was also attacked by the gang and there was no nexus between them (as alleged by the Sangh Parivar) - Compiler.

Muslims and Christians. He said "Things have come to such a pass that we are beginning to suspect if our Hindu girls who attend school will ever return home. Some Byaris (local Muslims) are always waiting to entrap them. Pointing out that the practices of burqa and Sunnat he asked if these were not blind beliefs, he mocked at them saying they might be getting all facilities probably because they are considered as disabled. ....Muslims and Christians are the real communalists. We are like foxes and not sheep." Another speaker, Chakravarti Sulibele said "It was Hindu Dharma which ..... Hindu Dharma also has sanctioned violence in the cause of religion. Two cricket teams of Pritinagar in Kulai (It may be noted that the teams appear to be formed along religious lines - compiler) fought with each other on a matter of settling the bet amount. This was sought to be turned into a communal flare-up by unscrupulous elements. The match had taken place around three weeks ago. On 13 January as Ijaz was going on his motorcycle, Anil and four others stopped him and demanded the betting amount. When Ijaz refused he was hit on the head. Ijaz ran away and informed his team members. Later at 8:30 pm Ijaz, Afiyaz and Tousif accompanied by a group of 10-15 persons forced their way inside a Pritinagar house. They asked for Anil and unable to find him, pushed Anil's father Sadashiva Acharya and mother Lalita down and created a rumpus. When Nitin and Devaraj came to enquire, the group beat them with cricket bats and stumps and chased them away. All the injured have been admitted to a private hospital at Mukka. In retaliation Devraj, Subhit Nikhil and others lay in wait for Ijaz Ahmed. When they spotted him on a motorcycle at around 9:45 pm, he was stopped, abused and assaulted with cricket bats and stumps. Ijaz has been admitted to a private hospital at Suratkal, it is learnt. - "Karavali Ale", 14th. & 17th; "Vartha Bharathi", 15th.

Tension prevailed in Kulai on Wednesday (January 15) during the procession of Eid-Milad-un-Nabi that followed tussle between groups of different communities over a betting issue. The police intervened to prevail upon the procession organisers to cut short the procession and prevent possible disturbance of peace in the area.

According to police, members of Om Shakti Cricket club and Green Stars club had a cricket match two weeks ago in which the Green Stars Club got defeated. The members of the club had agreed that the defeated team will pay the winning team an amount of Rs. 7,000. Following defeat, the Green Stars Club paid only around Rs. 3,000.

On Monday (January 13), members of Om Shakti Club called a few members of the Green Stars Club to a house in Kulai to ask for the remaining amount, the police said. Ijaz Ahmed and his friend, who are members of Green Stars club, went to the place. Mr. Ahmed allegedly did not agree to pay the amount and walked out of the house.

As he and his friend were riding down on a motorcycle, Ijaz Ahmed, who was riding a pillion, was hit on his head with a cricket stump. While Ijaz was taken to a hospital, his friends barged into the house of Anil, a member of Om Shakti Club and created a ruckus, the police said.

Tension prevailed in the area as the Eid-Milad-un-Nabi procession was to pass cross a Bahajan centre where supporters of Om Shakti Club had gathered. The police spoke to procession organisers and convinced them to stop it at a Masjid in Kulai. Assistant Commissioner of Police Ravi Kumar chaired a peace committee meeting near the Masjid.

14.1.2014. Mangalore.

A group of youths gathered near the Krishna Mandir [Gopala Krishna Bhajana Mandir] raised objections to the Id Milad procession that was scheduled to pass in front of the Mandir. The police arrived at the spot and tried to disperse the group but they did not budge. Later at night, the police held a peace meeting with several religious leaders in order to try and resolve the issue. -“Vartha Bharathi”, 15th.

It is now established that the news about someone from the Id Milad procession throwing stones at the Krishna Mandir was not at all true. Actually it was nothing but a conspiracy to create communal disturbances. This is corroborated by the fact that no complaint of stone-throwing has been registered at the Suratkal police station. Both the Suratkal Inspector Nagaraj and the Assistant Commissioner of Police Ravi Kumar have confirmed this. According to Ibrahim, secretary of the Kulai mosque, the procession had gone from the Kulai mosque to the Idgah mosque at Krishna Nagar accompanied by around 250 policemen including the ACP and the Inspector. While the procession was about to return they were told by the police that there was an input about a crowd gathered in front of the Krishna Mandir based on a rumour of stone-throwing. Hence, the police ordered that the procession should end at the mosque itself and not proceed further towards the Honnakatte junction as earlier permitted. The police order was complied with. Ibrahim pointed out that even during the subsequent peace meet, no one brought up the subject of stone-throwing. Meanwhile in view of the tense situation the police are maintaining a strict vigil. - “Karavali Ale”, 17th.

Upon receipt of information about the attack, the Suratkal police rushed to the spot and recovered the weapons used for the attack and the CCTV footage from the house of Siddiq. It is said that Kalander had refused to take back a case he had booked against members of a certain hindutva organization who had attacked his shop during the procession of the dead body of Kodikere Shivaraj (murdered by unknown assailants). BRIEF INTRODUCTION

Ullal, an integral part of Greater Mangalore, is a large suburb located at a distance of about 10 km from the city. It has a total population of 1,36,049 out of which 50,689 are Hindus and 67,481 are Muslims. It has one police station comprising: 1 Inspector, 2 Sub-inspectors, 4 Assistant Sub-inspectors, 10 Head Constables, 33 Constables and one woman Constable. This number is woefully inadequate when one compares it with UN standards.

On February 6, 2014 the local media carried extensive reports of an eruption of "communal flare-up" in Ullal on the previous day, i.e., February 5. It was reported that as a result of these disturbances several houses, vehicles and a boat were damaged. Prohibitory orders under Section 144 were clamped on Ullal. The February 7 media reports spoke of groups clashing with each other on the basis of unconfirmed news. Reportedly Mogaveerpatna residents were agitated on hearing a rumour that one of their boats was set on fire. Soon a large number of Mogaveers gathered and began throwing stones at residents of Kotepura and Kodi. The Kotepura, Kodi residents retaliated. Ultimately the situation was brought under control by the intervention of police. But, prohibitory orders were continued for a few more days as a measure of precaution.

REPORT OF VISIT BY THE FACT-FINDING TEAM

By February 12 when the situation became normal the team decided to embark on its fact-finding mission. On that day the team visited several houses in Kotepura and Kodi on either side of the D Road and recorded the statements of the residents and observed the damages.

- ✓ House No:..... Name of resident: Athur Hamid Musliyar (41). Occupation: Working since 13 years as Moulvi at the local Badriya Juma Masjid in Kodi. He stays at a house adjacent to the mosque.

Athur Hamid's statement:

On February 6, people had attended the namaz as usual and it was over at 8:30 pm. At around 9:30 pm as he was walking towards his house some policemen asked him who he was. Apparently they were satisfied with his reply that he was a Moulvi for they went away. Soon thereafter a woman ASI and some policemen appeared and questioned him. Though he explained his identity they barged inside the mosque and assaulted him with lathis. His left leg sustained heavy injury. Navaz Sakhafi's Statement:

A small gang of unruly Muslim boys were indulging in stone-throwing at Mogaveers' houses. On February 6 late evening Mogaveers threw stones at the mosque from outside the compound. The police instead of immediately controlling Mogaveer crowd allowed them sufficient time to do the damage. It is because of this that the entire incident got magnified.

Some 15 days ago there was a moral policing incident involving Hitaraj [a Mogaveer] and a [Muslim] woman from Phajeer. Hitaraj was beaten up by a group of Muslims. The pictures were uploaded on WhatsApp. The present disturbances during which the Mogaveers apparently took revenge could probably be the result of the Hitaraj incident and several other recent skirmishes between the two criminal gangs.

ANALYSIS & CONCLUSION

The Ullal region has an enviable history of communal harmony. Followers of different faiths have lived there in amity for the past hundreds of years. The famous queen Rani Abbakka who ruled the region in the 19th century and fought valiant battles against the British had employed people of all faiths in the various services of her kingdom including the armed forces. Fishing is the main occupation. It is jointly carried on by Mogaveers and Muslims. Usually it is the Mogaveers who catch the fish while it is the Muslim folk that do the marketing.

Communalization slowly crept in with the onset of country-wide communal riots, rath yatra, demolition of Babri Masjid, Gujarat pogrom etc. In 2006 there were communal riots in Ullal too in which the minorities suffered the most. The role of the police then had come in for sharp criticism since they were seen as being sympathetic to Sangh Parivar. In 2008 Sangh Parivar organisations attacked some churches in Ullal too.

The present Ullal incident cannot be seen in isolation but needs to be viewed as part of a series of attempts by the Bharatiya Janata Party to regain lost ground. The BJP had ruled the state from 2008 till 2013. The 2013 state assembly elections saw BJP lose almost all its seats in the district to its rival, the Congress. Now with the 2014 Lok Sabha elections round the corner, BJP appears extremely anxious to get back its lost base.

The recent, increasing incidents of communalism in the district including the major ones such as the Deralakatte and Kulai incidents appear to be part of the Sangh Parivar's game plan. Deralakatte and Kulai both started off as criminal cases but were soon sought to be turned into communal disturbances. From all indications the present Ullal incident too appears to be a continuation of the same series. It may be noted that among the 11 reasons quoted by the police in their submission before the 3rd JMFC Court of Mangalore asking for judicial custody, the first one states that there is an organised conspiracy to create Hindu - Muslim riots. Consider the February 8 newspaper reports which said there were a series of incidents in Kalladka (about 40 km from Mangalore on NH 48) which according to police had taken a communal turn. It is quite apparent that the main provocation for the Kalladka incidents (which occurred a couple of days later) was the Ullal incident.

A number of Ullal residents including Muslims have confirmed that there was an unruly group of Muslim youth that was indulging in consumption of drugs and about a month ago the group had started harassing Mogaveer residents by throwing stones at their houses, knocking on doors etc. This could be by accident or by design. It is not improbable that someone who deliberately wanted to provoke the Mogaveers could have hired the group to do this. Additionally rumours via SMS have played an important part. The alleged moral policing incident (quoted by the madrassa teacher) and other similar incidents may have served to whip up passions after the disturbances were set in motion. Baseless, mischievous rumours such as the one about boats being set on fire contributed to the creation of an artificial scare and led to an escalation of the disturbances. It is worth mentioning that it appears there are parallel gangs of Mogaveer and Muslim youth in Ullal that imbibe drugs and engage in criminal activities.

Details gathered by us point to the fact that the police who were deployed to prevent the formation of a mob and immediately disperse any such mob have failed in their duty. Instances have been reported wherein the police actually allowed the mob to attack some Muslim houses. The team has recorded statements by many Muslims who say that the police themselves attacked their houses on February 6 & 7. The reason for this behavior could be found in the saffronization of the police. The same forces that wanted to provoke the Mogaveers might have instructed the police to act in a partisan manner. Notably the atrocities committed during these raids went unreported since media persons were denied entry to Kotepura, Kodi area. Under cover of extraordinary powers, the police have by their apparent partiality towards one community and brutal actions against the other only served to further alienate the latter. These have given rise to an unnecessary fear and hatred and persecution complex amongst the minority population. Partisan behaviour of police is apparent from the fact that in the case of injured Muslims (admitted to Fr Mullers and Yenepoya hospitals) the police did not bother to visit the victims and obtain statements and prepare FIRs. They did that only after PUCL took it up with the Commissioner of Police. In the case of Shah Jahan, one of the victims, the police had in fact filed a counter case first without bothering to take his statement.

For once the administration appears to have been refreshingly different. It remained firm and did not yield to pressure from any quarter including Ministers, MLA's, MP's and a bunch of Hindu (read: Hindutva) Religious Heads to visit the disturbed areas during the period of conflict. This helped prevent any probable escalation and to quickly bring the situation to normal.

We feel that only a thorough inquiry can bring out the role of the disruptive forces in fomenting the present disturbances. Such anti-social forces need to be quickly identified and nullified before they succeed in causing more untold harm. At the same time, it is most important to see to it that the confidence of minorities in the administration is restored. The creation of a neutral police force is essential for reassuring the minority populations and one of the first steps in this direction is to purge the force of criminal and communal elements.

30.3.2014. Mangalore.

A mob of around 30 suspected Hindu Jagarana Vedike activists allegedly sexually assaulted a woman member of Mangalore City Corporation when she was canvassing for the Congress party on Sunday [30.3.2014].

The Hindu Jagarana Vedike has denied that its members molested the woman.

The attack, which reportedly occurred in full public view and was purportedly also captured on mobile phones by the attackers, came to light late on Tuesday after the Congress corporator (name withheld) addressed a press conference.

She said the Hindutva activists first surrounded her and then made a 16-year-old-member of their gang assault her at Kodikere near Mangalore around 4pm.

In the video, the boy can be seen grabbing the victim and attempting to strip her even as his comrades laugh and shout pro-Hindutva slogans.

As he attacks her, the teenager is heard saying, "Don't you find Hindu men attractive? Why do you like only Muslim men?"

The corporator is a Hindu. The slur was purportedly used in reference to her political proximity to some Muslim leaders of her party.

Videos of the attack have since been shared on WhatsApp, an instant messaging service for mobile phones.

The corporator said the attackers also threatened her that once Narendra Modi became the prime minister all people like her would be taught a lesson.

Modi is the Bharatiya Janata Party's prime ministerial candidate.

Asked about the attack, Satyajit Surathkal, south India convenor of the Hindu Jagarana Vedike (based in Mangalore) said, "Our boys were just talking to her. She suddenly started getting physically aggressive and some of our boys retaliated mildly. Nobody molested her."

He added, "We don't treat Hindu women like that. I have not seen the video everybody is talking about. I'm sure it is a fake."

Police inaction

The police registered an FIR in connection with the attack after Tuesday's press conference. The corporator claimed the police had reached the spot on Sunday soon after the attack, but made no effort to chase away or arrest the people who molested her.

"The police merely prevented them from causing further damage."

Mangalore police commissioner R Hitendra confirmed that many of the suspects had several other cases against them including murder and extortion.

Hitendra said, "We did not initially register a case because we did not receive a complaint. We have now provided her with an armed guard."

He failed to explain why the police did not register a complaint on their own despite officials reaching the spot soon after the assault, when the attackers were allegedly still around.

The police are yet to arrest any of the suspects.

The corporator claimed senior police officials had advised her to stay away from the area for her own safety.

Mangalore has seen similar vigilante attacks in the past.

Suspected Sri Rama Sene activists had attacked girls in a pub in January 2009. In July 2012, suspected Hindu Jagarana Vedike activists had assaulted 13 students including six girls in a show of moral policing at a house in Mangalore. This is often referred to as the homestay attack case.

The attack on the corporator, however, is the first known instance of a politician being targeted by the vigilantes.

'Act or I will quit'

"They dared to attack me even though our government is in power. If no action is taken I will resign from my post," the corporator said at the press conference she addressed with local Congress MLA Moideen Bawa.

Bawa appealed for "justice". Soon after he made that appeal, people targeted him on the social media, seeking to know who he wants justice from when the Congress is in power in Karnataka.

Seven of the eight MLAs in Mangalore are from the Congress and three of them are cabinet ministers.

The incident has triggered resentment among a section of Congress workers in the district.

Vidya Dinker of the Forum Against Atrocities on Women said, "If the Congress cannot protect its own people despite being in power, what about ordinary women? There has been a huge increase in attacks on women by such groups after the Congress came to power."

Incidentally, this forum was formed in the aftermath of the homestay attack.

Not the first time

The corporator said her attackers had been harassing her ever since she started campaigning for the corporation elections. The harassment continued when Bawa was nominated for the 2013 assembly elections. She claimed six months ago, the Hindutva activists had waylaid her car when her five-year-old daughter was with her.

"They don't want any party but the BJP to enter their area. They also object when we take non-Hindus for campaigning," she said.

5.12.2014. Mangaluru.

Tension prevailed at Ulaibettu near Vamanjoor on the outskirts of the city following a clash between two groups on the night of December 5. At least nine persons were injured.

The trouble began, according to police, when a group of people in a vehicle who were on their way to Datta Peetha at Bababudangiri Chikkamagaluru district, was blocked by another group, saying the road was being concreted and it could not be used.

After heated exchanges, the vehicle started moving but it was pelted with stones. In retaliation, stones were thrown on a few other vehicles and later on a place of worship around 10 p.m. on Friday, according to the police.

This led to a spate of attacks on people and damage to vehicles near Ulaibettu, leaving nine persons injured and damage to a few cars and two-wheelers. Additional forces were requisitioned to maintain peace and order in the area.

People of the area maintained that the groups that clashed were not from Ulaibettu.

The injured persons, who have been hospitalised, said the attack on them was “unprovoked”. Yashodhar (29), who was hit on the head, chest and legs, said he had been attacked twice without any provocation. His brother Jagadish, sister Soumya, and her neighbour Babita too were injured.

Mr. Jagadish alleged that a team of policemen, who were near the place of attack, did not act fast. “I begged with the police officer to save my brother, but they just turned away,” he charged.

Residents of Ulaibettu belonging to one community alleged police highhandedness while rounding up people after the incident.

They alleged that the police broke open the doors of most houses on a lane and all flats in an apartment complex, alleging that they were protecting the attackers. They rounded up 28 persons for questioning.

Police Commissioner R. Hitendra defended the police action, saying there was a complaint against people of a particular community and the police had to force open the doors as the residents did not cooperate.

The police have registered the complaint by the injured persons and have arrested 23 persons.

A separate case has been registered for the stoning of a place of worship. – The Hindu, 6th.

For a community in Ullaibettu, it isn't communal fault lines that are driving them to squat in front of their houses in fear. It is the police, who in their midnight 'vigil' on the village, are alleged to have forced themselves into 25 houses and taken the young men into questioning.

After group violence in the main road, residents said a posse of policemen descended on the town, around 20 km from Mangaluru, and began their "sweep" around 2 p.m. Most residents who talked to The Hindu said they were sleeping at the time when the police began knocking at their doors. By the end of the sweep, two lanes by the Ullaibettu junction bore a string of broken doors.

"We heard the doorbells. By the time we could get up and come at the door, around 20 policemen had knocked it down and began rounding up the young men," said Abdul Khader, a resident.

Jainabbu (60) was alone in her tiled-roof house when policemen broke through her door and accused her of sheltering men, she said in tears. Further up the lane, doors of all 12 houses in an apartment were broken – even one house where no one stayed. In a house where eight women stay, the residents accused the "abusive" police of entering at 3 a.m., pushing them aside, and threatening to arrest them. Police are accused of ransacked belongings and cupboards.

By sunrise, over 28 people from the village were taken from their houses for questioning. "When the ones supposed to be protecting us start to torment us, where do we go," said Ibrahim.

Reaction

City Police Commissioner R. Hitendra said the police had the right to enter the houses during "searches".

“When people do not cooperate with us by opening the door, we have the right to use force and enter...There is no need for a warrant in non-cognizable cases such as these,” he said.

On the accusation that the police did not wait for the doors to be open, Mr. Hitendra said, “This is just their version of events. They did not cooperate.” – The Hindu, 7th.

Pranav (20), a BBM student, dropped his friend at Perari and while returning, he passed by a bus that had been stoned near Ullaibettu around 10.30 p.m. on Friday and he added that he became the target of a group of people.

Nearly 24 injured persons have been admitted at two different hospitals following a disturbance in Ullaibettu on the bank of the Gurupura on Friday night. While 14 were injured following clashes, others were injured when the police reportedly pushed them aside while searching for the persons involved in the attack.

Residents of Perari said the attack on them was unprovoked. “They just started hitting vehicles going down to Permaki on the newly laid concrete road,” said Uday, an autorickshaw driver.

Yashodhar (29) said he was first hit while he was coming with his friend Praveen from Ullaibettu to Archebail on a motorcycle. The next was when he was returning on the same road with another friend Vishwanath (27).

“I was hit by a sharp object on the left hand,” said Vishwanath, whose fingers were heavily bandaged.

Manoj Kumar, who works in a car dealer firm, had injuries on the back and the right shoulder and added he had to pretend unconscious to avoid being further hit by the mob near Ullaibettu.

Hazara, a resident of Ullaibettu, said many people barged into their house in an inebriated state around 11 p.m. They hit her on her head while going out of the house after damaging articles. “They were just looking for my son, who had gone for work.” – The Hindu, 7th.

With a large police presence still blanketing the village, Ullaibettu remained peaceful on Sunday, two days after communal tension spurted into violence in the town.

Residents said though there was little to show friction in the village – around 20 km from the city – there was an uneasy calm due to the presence of the police. “People still remember the midnight raids they had conducted on the houses. No one is venturing far from their houses,” said a resident.

The Mangaluru Rural Police have booked three cases following a clash between two communities on Friday night when pilgrims headed to Babubudangiri in Chikkamagaluru district were attacked and a counter-attack took place on the place of worship. The clashes left around 25 people injured.

While 23 people from one community in Ulaibettu have been arrested following the first complaint, the police are yet to identify or arrest those accused in the two counter complaints filed on Saturday.

“A vehicle number has been given in the complaint, and we have set up bandobasts everywhere to see if the vehicle can be spotted,” said a police officer. The police have been scouring through Vamanjoor and the villages around Ulaibettu for those who may be connected to the violence.

The Bajrang Dal, Vishwa Hindu Parishad and other affiliated organisations had called for a bandh to protest the alleged attack on a group proceeding to Babubudangiri in Chikkamagaluru on Friday night that led to group clashes in Ulaibettu on the outskirts of Mangaluru. Police issued prohibitory orders on movement of people in groups in Ulaibettu and neighbouring Parari area from Monday morning.

A large number of protesters, led by Rajashekaranda Swami from the Vajradehi Math, came in a procession from Vamanjoor around 11 a.m. The police stopped them from entering the road leading to Ulaibettu. In protest, they began throwing stones at a hoarding of Mangaluru City North MLA Mohiuddin Bava. Some stones pelted a bus ferrying policemen, and some of them were injured. The police caned the protesters, who finally dispersed. Nearly 60 protesters were taken into custody.

The remaining protesters moved to Vamanjoor junction where they held a demonstration. The former MP Tejaswimi Gowda and former Minister B. Nagaraj Shetty participated in the meeting.
